ABOUT CCJ

The Connecting for Children's Justice Conference (CCJ) is hosted by Children's Advocacy Centers (CACs) of Tennessee. In past years, this conference has been held in person, and offered workshops to more than 700 professionals from across the state. This year it is delivered through a virtual platform, and provides opportunities for child abuse professionals to train in tandem with fellow colleagues in live, recorded and on-demand settings.

Who benefits? Children experiencing physical abuse, sexual abuse, or human trafficking in Tennessee and the professionals who serve them.

When & Where? October 26-28, 2020: Virtual platform

Who attends the conference? Child welfare, law enforcement, prosecutors, medical, and mental health professionals attend CCJ to train together and share their expertise with the goal of providing the best possible services to children and families experiencing abuse.

SPONSOR BENEFITS

- Strengthen Your Brand – Enhance brand awareness by engaging with our professional community.
- Targeted Marketing – Market your products/services to child abuse professionals from across the country. Many of the participants are decision-makers and influencers in their fields.
- Support an Important Cause – Quality training results in quality services. Child abuse survivors deserve quality care and assistance, which can only be gained through expert training and resources. Your support provides our members with the tools necessary to deliver hope and healing to children and families experiencing abuse.
